Top 3 Tax Season Tips from TDECU Wealth Advisors

The tax season has begun, and the documents are on their way!

Many taxpayers have already received their W2s which employers are required to send out by January 31. The deadline for filing this year's taxes is April 18, 2023, a few days later than usual.

TDECU VP of Wealth Management Ed Cruz offers these top 3 tax season tips:

- Gather your tax documents and information
 - In addition to your W-2, be on the lookout for other important documents you'll need for filing your taxes, such as 1099 forms reporting any investment income and 5498 forms noting contributions and rollovers to individual retirement accounts.
- Document your credits and deductions
 - Deductions can lower your taxes since they reduce your taxable income, so claim as many as you legally can. Gather documentation for any donations, expenses for medical care, mortgage interest, retirement account contributions, and local and state taxes you paid in 2022.
- Review your estimated tax payments

- Gather and provide information on how much you've already paid in taxes, whether through estimated tax payments, income withholdings, or both. This helps you quickly calculate your total amount due once you've entered your income, deduction, credit, and withholding information.

- Portfolio management
- Investments and savings – mutual funds, stocks, bonds, CDs, and more
- Retirement planning and tax-advantaged accounts
- College fund planning and savings plans
- Insurance planning
- And more!
